The Time Is Short

Only about three weeks remain in which to complete your preparations for the Stock Show.

As stated last week, some improvements have been made on track and grounds by the managers, and parties wishing to use same for practice purposes may have free access to track and stalls until the Show.

The date for closing entries will soon be here, and while some have selected their classes and listed, others are postponing the matter. Make up your mind as to these points and let the list be completed in time to get your name in its proper place in the program, which will have to go to press before long.

In little Highland, so famed for stock-grazing and rearing, the interest ought to be universal and at the boiling point all the time. Even when people are not reasonably sure of first honors, an exhibition of your best will help and stimulate you and your neighbors. There is going to be a big attendance from the outside world—some of the visitors will come to take part in the classes and contests open to them—and the home feature of the exhibition should not be short in any particular.

It has been frequently stated, and the management has done all it could to emphasize the fact, that the Stock show is primarily a Highland organization, designed to advertise the county, stimulate stockmen and promote their interests, and every precaution has and will be taken to prevent it from losing its identity as such. The decision to admit county exhibits—exclusive of ring contests—free, is a generous concession and will be appreciated and understood by county people who are interested and in sympathy with the organization. See notice of free entries in another column.

With the wind-up of the haying season Highlanders should devote all needed time to the annual stock exhibition, and thus guarantee its perfect success. The 1911 show was so good that we must get busy and keep busy if we hope to make this one any better, but it can be done, and ought to be.
